Dedication

This book is dedicated to my wife, Dawn, who followed my chapters around, tested all the steps in this book on her Windows Me computer, and often said things like, “What you have said in this part makes no sense.” Although aggravating at the time, she has helped make this book better and easier for you to use!

On a more serious note, writing is a lonely profession, and Dawn invariably has to share in some of that alone time as constant deadlines come my way. God has really blessed me with a wife who is always understanding, always loving, and always supportive when I have spend a little too much time in my “computer cave.”
About the Author

Curt Simmons is a Windows expert who makes his living as a freelance author, trainer, and courseware developer. Curt has written more than a dozen high-level computing books about Microsoft technologies and related topics. He holds the Microsoft Certified Systems Engineer (MCSE), Microsoft Certified Trainer (MCT), and Chauncy Group Certified Technical Trainer (CTT) certifications. When he is not writing books, he and his wife spend their time constantly refurbishing their 100-year-old historical home. Curt and his family live in a small town outside of Dallas, and you can reach him on the Internet at http://curtsimmons.hypermart.net.

Thanks to everyone at Osborne—it’s been a real joy to work with you all. Special thanks to Roger Stewart, who rescued me (for a moment) from the land of Active Directory to do this really fun book. I also owe a big thanks to Cindy Wathen, who answered my nit-picky questions and kept the paper shuffle moving to the right people (I still owe you that Tex-Mex dinner!). Thanks to Jennifer Malnick and Sally Engelfried, who scrutinized my sentences and word choices—they have helped make this book really great. Also, thanks to Tyler Regis, the technical editor for this book, who brought his expertise to the table. Finally, as always, thanks to Margot Maley, my literary agent, who takes care of me.
